

18 November 2012

European Academic Heritage Day

European Academic Heritage Network

universeum

European Academic Heritage Day
2012 theme: *Objects in contexts?

UNIVERSITÀ
DEGLI STUDI
DI PADOVA

Objects in contexts? Or contexts for objects? In the case of objects held in the collections of the archaeological museum at the University of Padova and coming from excavation missions many times the study of contexts, thanks to the historical record, becomes an opportunity for more extensive researches including the history and the techniques of archaeological research.

Museum of Archaeological Science and Art

Excavation archives: the rediscovery of an heritage

Department of Cultural Heritage: archaeology, history of art, film and music

Museum - November 22, 2012 - 03:30 p.m.

The Museum of Archaeological Science and Art at the University of Padova has a rich historical archive on the excavations of Carlo Anti, professor of archaeology and Rector of the University from 1932 to 1943. On the occasion of the European Academic Heritage Day, the recovery of this fund will be illustrated. Such a study is essential both for the contextualization of the related archaeological objects collected in the museum and the history of the Italian archaeological research during the time in which Carlo Anti had a position of excellence.

with the contributions of

ALESSANDRA MENEGAZZI,

University of Padova

Photography and archaeological excavations in the Archives of Carlo Anti

GIULIA DEOTTO, University of Padova

Tebtynis (Fayum - Egypt): a recovered context

At the event some posters related to research projects in progress will be displayed in the Museum